

The Wedding Ring.
I open wide my treasure box—
A golden circle greets my eye;
Ah! me! no wonder starts the tear,
No wonder that I sigh.

For in the boundary of that ring
Is all the joy of my life;
'Tis what I live for, and I live,
I hoped to call my wife.

It could not be, and I must bear My pain and sorrow as I may;
But yet the anguish has its balm—
It teaches me to pray.

Our names are graven in the gold—
I wonder if, in hours of gloom,
She sometimes checks her rippling laugh
To turn a thought on me.

And picture to her mind the kiss That heralded the ring she gave,
And ponder if I live and laugh,
Or slumber in my grave.

But what the pleasures of the good?
Why should she weep or even sigh?
Perhaps she feels the joy to live,
That I should lose to die.

I drop the ring and close the lid—
Would I could shut out the past;
For why recall so sweet a hope,
To claim a tear at last?

Distinction is an eminence which is attained but too frequently at the expense of a fireside.

People would rather pardon the defects you have, than the affectionation of virtues you have not.

FEMINE HEADACHE.—A fictitious disease, by which women seek to conceal their heartache.

The greatest coward may avoid shaking in his shoes by wearing boots or going barefooted.

We may owe it to our enemies to forgive; we owe it to ourselves not to forget.

Read not books alone, but men; and, chiefly, be careful to read themselves.

If a ship is of the feminine gender, why are not fighting vessels called women-of-war, instead of men-of-war?

More than one thousand years ago the Chinese built suspension bridges more than four hundred feet span.

Rhyming lovers generally woo there sweethearts in such wretched verse that it is no wonder so many of them are jilted.

It was wittily, but somewhat ungallantly, said that a woman is the very reverse of her mirror—the one reflects without talking, the other talks without reflecting.

A clear river reflects all objects that are upon its shore, but is unsullied by them; so it should be with our hearts—they should show the effect of all objects, and yet remain unharmed by any.

Were we to ask a hundred men who from small beginnings have attained a condition of respectability and influenced to what they imputed their success in life, the general answer would be: "It was from being early compelled to think for and depend on ourselves."

A young lady who was employed in braiding a guard-chain for a gentleman's watch, was asked what it was for. A "bell-rope sir," replied she. "I acknowledge it is a belle-rope," rejoined he, "and a pretty one too; but I suspect we shall find a beau attached to it when it is finished."

A country apothecary, not a little distinguished for his impudence, with a hope of disconcerting a young clergyman, whom he knew how to be a man of singular modesty, asked him in the hearing of a large company. "Why the patriarchs of old lived to such an extreme age?" To which the clergyman replied, "I suppose the ancient patriarchs took no physic."

PROVERBS.
He who will not work neither shall be eat."

It is too late to spare when all is spent.

A fat kitchen makes a lean will.
The world is his who has patience and industry.

He who would by the plow thrive, he himself must either hold or drive.

A good story is told concerning the writing of a certain railroad manager. He had written to a man on the route, notifying him that he must remove a barn, which in some manner incommoded the road, under penalty of prosecution.
The threatened individual was unable to read any part of his letter but the signature, but took it to be free pass on the road, and used it for a couple of years as such, none of the conductors being able to disturb his interpretation.
